

Auditing HD Surveillance IP PTZ Network Cams AV Podcasting Business Continuity, Backup and Disaster Recovery Planning (BCBDRP) can prevent and reduce fraud, false allegation, while promoting Safety and Security

By Avi Rushinek, & Sara Rushinek, Business School, University of Miami

Abstract

This study describes how repurposed surveillance AV (Audio Video) recording can be integrated into an accounting infrastructure and become part of a comprehensive computer audit sub-system. In particular, we are looking at the AV Podcasting Business Continuity, Backup and Disaster Recovery Planning (BCBDRP) facet of the system. The idea is to archive these AV recording and repurpose them for distance education, automated transcription, captioning, translation, broadcasting and webcasting instructional materials, as well as for BCBDRP. Even though such an idea is so obvious when we think about it, we could not find more than a single instance of a discussion about it on the WWW, as of today. The auditing work should be extended beyond the historical examination of 1 year old accounting records to real-time and archived AV podcasts of the instructional and educational contents. That way the auditors of such educational and instructional organizations can find out whether the main mission of such organizations is carried out. The auditor can offer a relevant audit opinion, and most importantly, the auditors can offer relevant and timely deficiency remediation recommendation. This way a security guard of a lecture theater, that shows up to at the beginning of his shift, punches the clock, and takes off until the end of his shift, can be discovered. Real-time surveillance A/V podcast audit can help discover such behavior early on and "nip it in the bud," before it become too late. Otherwise, it may take years, and a class-room slaughter (like Virginia Tech University of 2007) for an auditor to discover such incidences, and apply remedial action. For this purpose 2-way full duplex (enables interruptions like telephone communication, in contrast with walkie talking communication, saying "over" when switching speakers) enabled systems are particularly useful since they enable the police to interactive fluently with an intruder. An instructor can easily communicate with distance education students, etc.

HD Surveillance IP Network Cams

Surveillance IP PTZ Network Cams or Cameras directly connect to a router, without any computer, they can run continuously on the network 24x7x360, 24 hours, 7 days a week, and 360 days a year. HD refers to high definition A/V, Audio Video, which is particularly important for educational and training purposes, where students have to understand verbatim what the instructor is saying and writing on the board, especially in analytical programming medical type of classes. For this purpose PTZ (Pant Tilt and Zoom) enables the participants to further zoom in on a subject, for even better comprehension that HD by itself enables. The cameras are part of a network, connecting to the WWW (World Wide Web) directly through a router and thus not subject to the crashes of a PC (Personal Computer). Such cameras have a storage device, such as SD (Secured Digital), or MS (Memory Stick) storing AV of the last 2 weeks. The open source OS (Operating System) provides API (A Programmer Interface) to facilitate podcasting of the AV directly from the cams to subscribers devices, such as iPod, iPhone, PC and other devices, using software such as iTunes, and e-commerce sites, such as iTunesU Stores. This way if the demand for the videos overloads the cameras infrastructure, the providers, universities, municipalities, etc can easily charge for the contents reducing the demand to more acceptable levels.

MIAMI HAROLD REPORTS DRAGGING FRAUD LITIGATION & SECURITY LAPSES

The Miami Herald reported about "doctored time sheets, logbooks and other records to cover up staffing shortfalls -- often with the knowledge of company supervisors. as much as $4 million of the annual Wackenhut bills are bogus.. ultimate payout could be tens of millions, because the False Claims Act includes a provision for triple damages. ...As the litigation drags into its third year, Wackenhut keeps a high-powered lobbying roster to maintain its relationship with County Hall." The security company claims that no "single iota of proof that any Wackenhut employee was paid for time that they did not actually work" exists. The auditor report "instances in which guards appear to be filling in at multiple posts at the same time. In one extreme example, a guard appears to have been paid for 54 hours over a three-day period -- five straight shifts of 10 or more hours, with only two 3 ½-hour breaks, records show...both sides have known about the staffing problems and billing issues at least since 1999. In early 2005, shortly after The Miami Herald reported some of the original fraud allegations, ...Spot inspections increased in 2006 and 2007, and Wackenhut was forced to pay nearly $500,000 in so-called liquidated damages for violations such as guards working excessive hours and "insufficient manpower" to fill all posts."

Miami Herald reports the details of such cases in a recent article, as follows:

"http://www.miamiherald.com/news/breaking\_dade/story/486235.html." "30 months after it began, ... 'ghost posts' audit still pending." Posted on Mon, Apr. 07, 2008, by LARRY LEBOWITZ AND SCOTT HIAASEN, llebowitz@MiamiHerald.com. " In August 2006, Miami-Dade County's top auditor found evidence that Wackenhut Corp. had billed the county nearly $1.6 million over a three-year period for 69,000 hours worth of work that its employees -- private security guards who patrol ....Auditor Cathy Jackson sent those findings -- which suggest that the private security firm may have overbilled the county -- to Wackenhut that month. They were never publicly released. Nineteen months later, the audit still hasn't come out, the impact of the potentially damaging draft remains unclear and Jackson could be facing jail time because she refuses to discuss it. Jackson's report, begun some 30 months ago, is at the center of an unusual lawsuit that accuses Wackenhut of widespread fraud for allegedly overbilling Miami-Dade millions of dollars for unguarded "ghost posts" on the transit system... and at the Juvenile Assessment Center.

"The audit is the result of baseless allegations by individuals who believe, or have been made to believe, that there is a pot of gold at the end of an imaginary rainbow," said Wackenhut spokesman Bruce Rubin. "Unfortunately for them, these are things only found in fairy tales."

"The accusations have also spawned a short-lived inspector general's investigation, a criminal probe and three years of bare-knuckle civil litigation littered with accusations of purloined documents and witnesses coached to lie. County public-corruption detectives raided Wackenhut's Miami office in mid-December after a tipster said a top company manager was shredding documents just three weeks after receiving an investigative subpoena.

Wackenhut lawyers insist the tip was part of a larger campaign aimed at embarrassing the company. Defense attorney Steven Chaykin said the company voluntarily turned over all the records -- plus two garbage bags of meaningless shred unrelated to the Metrorail contract."

"That bogus tip," Chaykin said, "is a perfect example of the false accusations being wrongfully made against Wackenhut by those seeking to malign Wackenhut." Arching over all the inquiries surrounding Wackenhut is a lawsuit in which lawyer H. Mark Vieth seeks to recover millions that he claims the company has overbilled Miami-Dade County since 2001. While Miami-Dade would receive 75 percent of any money Vieth's suit recovered, the lawyer says he has received little cooperation from the county."

"They haven't lifted a finger to help me, but they've done plenty to thwart me," Vieth said. "I've never seen a group of people so resistant to having millions of dollars thrust into their hands like the county." A case in point is Jackson's audit, which started in late 2005 shortly after the lawsuit was filed. During a deposition last month, the auditor refused to answer Vieth's questions about her findings -- even questions that a county attorney advised her to answer."

"Vieth has asked a judge to hold Jackson in contempt of court over her refusal to answer. A contempt hearing is set for later this month. Jackson has previously argued that she should not have to discuss the document -- stamped "draft" and "for discussion only" -- until it's complete. She believes that releasing the report in draft form violates exemptions provided to auditors under the state public records law. Wackenhut also wanted the document kept under wraps. But an appeals court ordered the company to turn it over to Vieth and his six whistle-blower clients.

The company declined to comment specifically on the draft audit's finding that Wackenhut received $1.6 million for employee hours that employees were not paid for. But Wackenhut spokesman Rubin said the report is an incomplete snapshot of Jackson's work, and company executives believe they have explained the seeming irregularities raised in it. "Whatever the findings are, Wackenhut will resolve this to everyone's satisfaction," Rubin said.

Jackson did not respond to interview requests. County Mayor Carlos Alvarez and Manager George Burgess also refused to discuss Jackson's audit, the contempt charges, the civil suit or the criminal investigation. Alvarez and Burgess, along with former Transit Director Roosevelt Bradley, are set to give depositions later this month in the civil suit. Vieth's lawsuit, filed on behalf of a former juvenile-center security guard named Michelle Trimble, was brought under the county's False Claims ordinance. That law lets private citizens and whistle-blowers who uncover public fraud collect damages. In sworn depositions, Trimble and dozens of other former guards say Wackenhut never had enough staffers to fulfill its county contracts.

They say they doctored time sheets, logbooks and other records to cover up staffing shortfalls -- often with the knowledge of company supervisors. "On many occasions, over a hundred occasions, there are times where I put in officers' names who did not work," said Eric Rowe, who worked for Wackenhut until 1999. "I had pushed myself to the limit trying to straighten out these ghost posts and open posts, and I just couldn't control it," said former Wackenhut supervisor Starlin Horne.

Others described the "Wackenhut Incentive Plan": Guards would work a 10-hour day shift, and then agree to stick around for three or four hours to fill an empty post on the second shift. The guards testified they would go home early, after ... busiest rush hour had ended, but get paid as if they worked the full double shift. Regardless, in terms of actual dates and times at which the alleged fraud occurred, Wackenhut lawyer Angela De Cespedes Wenke argued at a recent court hearing that Vieth still has not produced a ``single iota of proof that any Wackenhut employee was paid for time that they did not actually work."

Real-time and archived AV podcast audits can quickly show proof for such allegations, avoiding lengthy litigation, security lapses and other problems. Such AV podcast can be easily attached to the audit paper, as supplemental evidence to standard working papers.

"The Wackenhut lawyers also say the broader allegations are merely unfounded claims of disgruntled ex-employees. While guards may have been shifted around to cover vacant posts -- a routine occurrence in the large operation -- the county was not overcharged, they say. Terry Grant, ... security manager who oversees the Wackenhut contract, testified that his office could find no evidence of fraud in a 2006 review prompted by Vieth's suit. Vieth, however, says he has compiled a list of instances in which guards appear to be filling in at multiple posts at the same time. In one extreme example, a guard appears to have been paid for 54 hours over a three-day period -- five straight shifts of 10 or more hours, with only two 3 ½-hour breaks, records show.

Citing internal Wackenhut audits and Transit agency letters to the company, Vieth said. Wackenhut earns more than $17.5 million annually under a contract it has held with Miami-Dade Transit since 1989 -- on a no-bid basis since 1994. The company receives another $1.4 million a year at the .... Assessment Center. Vieth has argued that as much as $4 million of the annual Wackenhut bills are bogus. If he prevails, the ultimate payout could be tens of millions, because the False Claims Act includes a provision for triple damages. As the litigation drags into its third year, Wackenhut keeps a high-powered lobbying roster to maintain its relationship with County Hall. Former U.S. Rep. Carrie Meek is a registered lobbyist for the firm. Her son, U.S. Rep. Kendrick Meek, and his wife, Leslie, have also lobbied for Wackenhut in the past. The firm recently added two prominent Cuban-American lobbyists: former County Manager Sergio Pereira and political operative Armando Gutierrez.

Still, it's clear that the controversy has already cost Wackenhut. In late 2006, the firm appeared to have won a $4.8 million contract to provide screening and security ...Manager Burgess pulled back the award at the 11th hour, citing the ongoing audit and Vieth's allegations. It is still pending. In early 2005, shortly after The Miami Herald reported some of the original fraud allegations, former Transit director Bradley ordered his security staffers to more vigilantly enforce the contract.

Since July 2006, the county has also reduced the requirements -- and the gross pay -- for Wackenhut, paring back dozens of positions that had been required on a daily basis. Transit says the posts were cut to save money while not endangering safety. Vieth sees it differently. The cuts, he said, came in areas that Wackenhut had left vacant in the past -- the so-called ghost posts: ``I certainly gave them the heads up that if they wanted to save some money, these were the places to look."

AV PODCAST HAVE BEEN USED FOR BUSINESS CONTINUITY PLANNING,

BACKUP & DISASTER RECOVERY

One of the most important disaster recovery procedures for an educational training organization is not anything else but the instructional AV (Audio Video) contents itself. Yet, we were able to find only one reference to it on the internet WWW (World wide Web) so far. This single case describes how "Hurricane Katrina served as a painful catalyst to stimulate the growth of online learning at Delgado Community College in New Orleans." This community college later realized how important is the AV contents to its business continuity, using AV recording, real-time and archived video podcasting developed by Tegrity corporation. Following is a discussion of their experiences.

"From Disaster Recovery to Growth: Delgado Community College Serves Online and Traditional Students with Class Replay Hurricane Katrina served as a painful catalyst to stimulate the growth of online learning at Delgado Community College in New Orleans. Capturing and delivering classes online with Tegrity Campus offered an effective learning alternative for displaced students, and a majority of students who endured for the Katrina-interrupted semester were able to successfully complete courses. Today, Delgado is not only surviving, but thriving, with increased student recruitment and retention resulting from its blended offerings. Tegrity's web-based class capture and replay is a key ingredient to this success. Tegrity provides preparation for future hurricane seasons, but more importantly, it effectively serves working students by combining face-to-face coursework along with online sections. In this one-hour interactive session, you will learn from Delgado administrators and faculty about how they have deployed Tegrity, and how they have maximized the impact on student achievement."

<http://www.tegrity.com/webinars.php>

<http://apollo.tegrityonline.com/tegrity/Marketing/313/delgado%20webinar2a3c2df0a-e082-47a3c2df0a-e082-47aa-b9af-b47b0d613324/Class/TegrityPlayer.htm?>

In a webinar administrators and professors further describe their experiences in the following ways "Scattering of students helps keep them in the program and impacting new remote students. Professors recorded telephone conversation using Tegrity, and then repurposing them for the online distance education for the distributed students. Using the technology to prepare and plan ahead, as part of a disaster recovery and preparation for a disaster.

Leadership in the school shows how colleges can have alternative servers, even if the local servers are down, student can use remote server, continuing instructions as usual. The Tegrity integration of Blackboard can automatically push the tegrity through the Blackboard server, relieving the university with the requirements of a local web server. In the event that the local IT is incompetent etc.

The student may have to install a Java module that facilitate the Microsoft Virtual Machine. Students want to listen to the lecture on an IPod, may face a problem, since it requires some special activity to enable the iPhone to sync with iTunes. Students can use MP3 players to playback the lectures. The lectures are indexed by the .PPT (Power Point Slides). Why would students bother to come to class, if they can watch it on Tegrity, online? Some students that abuse it, can be controlled by restricting the playback to a day after the class has been taught, to prevent students from cramming everything a day before finals.

Disaster recovery & planning, lets students fill-out form about remote relative phone, and e-mail. So, if a disaster hits, students switch immediately to the remote alternate location, and complete their education in time, using online distance education. It should always be used as a support tool, and not as a substitute for an instructor led class."

We can see clear evidence that a large number of universities discovered video podcasting, blended learning, and distance education, yet none has yet integrated it fully into a comprehensive Business Continuity, Backup and Disaster Recovery Planning (BCBDRP) infrastructure. Following is a discussion of a typical approach to AV podcasting available on the WWW"

UNIVERSITIES PODCAST AV USING APPLE'S ITUNES U

"Does UCLA on iTunes U support both audio and video podcasting? Yes. UCLA on iTunes U may be used to distribute a wide variety of compressed audio and video files. Apple recommends using the following formats for your UCLA on iTunes U audio and video content: Audio files (AAC, MP3) with appropriate file extensions (.m4a, .mp3), Video files (MPEG-4, H.264) with appropriate file extensions (.mp4, .m4v, .mov). Additionally you can also use UCLA on iTunes U to distribute Portable Document Format (PDF) files for lecture notes. <http://itunes.ucla.edu/itunes/info/faq> "

AV PODCAST INCREASE ROI OF DISTANCE & BLENDED EDUCATION

Much like the idea of AV podcasting, its impact on ROI (Return On Investment) is also quite obvious, yet the connection to accounting, auditing and BCBDRP is not so obvious. Following is a typical discussion of ROI AV podcasting & distance education: "The ROI of Online/Distance Learning Technology "The focus of this one-hour online web seminar session is on measurable results from online/distance learning technology. Presenters will share data that demonstrates improvement in grades and performance with this technology used to produce, capture and share lectures and demonstrations."
